I had been told by many healing professionals that my lungs were full of grief and heartache and these emotions needed to be released but I was incapable of getting rid of the pain there. I tried many different avenues for several years and even went to a naturopathic doctor in Arkansas who discovered a tumor in my lungs. He explained the connection to holding onto grief and other negative emotions was the culprit of disease in the body. I underwent a series of treatments to heal the tumor but it persisted.

Eventually I was led to Chariss.

I began to see results after the first body systems release treatment and by the end of the 7 sessions, the tumor was gone and so was the pain and despair.

It has been three years and I have not had a recurrence and my life is very different now.

Chariss, I cannot thank you enough for the healing you gave to my life!
